Protecting Senior Assets:

5 Signs of Elder Financial Abuse and How to Prevent It

One in 20 seniors experience financial abuse and over 50% of it occurs at the hands of relatives and people they trust. It is a growing problem, and is grossly under-reported due to senior dependency on their caregivers. It is important to take steps before a physical or mental crisis arises, to protect yourself or your loved ones. Janis will cover

- How to recognize financial abuse
- Who is most vulnerable
- Where to turn for help
- What can be done to prevent it

“I worked with Janis for many years, on different committees associated with Boy Scouts. She was a very active parent and hard worker, always handling the financial matters of the various committees and the Troop. Trustworthy, is what comes to mind first when I think of Janis. I could always trust that she would get accurate information together in a timely manner. Her cheerful personality makes her a pleasure to work with. —J.R.

“You have saved me a lot of headaches. Not being able to write makes it hard for me to do a lot of things. I would recommend you to thousands of people if I could. I am just very, very appreciative of what you have done for me.”
